Who is Ahmad Aldabobi

Ahmad Aldabobi is a Jordanian chef and food content creator known for his spontaneous style and his famous catchphrase, "Yamma Ta'ali Douqi" (Mom, come taste). His culinary career began outside of Jordan, where he spent four years working in hotels in the United Arab Emirates, first in Abu Dhabi and then in Dubai. During this time, he gained practical experience, trained under professional chefs like Sudqi Naddaf, and specialized in Thai cuisine. Upon returning to Jordan, his career took a new turn. After a seven-year break from his studies, he completed his high school education (Tawjihi) and subsequently enrolled at the University of Jordan to study English. In parallel with his studies, he began creating content for social media, presenting food recipes in a simple and engaging manner. He quickly gained widespread popularity for his cheerful personality and content focused on easy home cooking, often featuring interactions with his mother, who has become an integral part of his brand. Ahmad hosts his own YouTube show, "Hat Al-Qalaya w Elha'ni" (Bring the Pan and Follow Me), where he invites other celebrities and influencers for entertaining cooking challenges. He has also appeared on television programs, most notably as a guest with Chef Imtiaz Al-Jitawi on the show "Bahar w Nar" on Amman TV.

Achievements of Ahmad Aldabobi

Ahmad Aldabobi has built a successful personal brand in the online culinary space, becoming one of Jordan's most prominent food content creators. His style is distinguished by his catchphrase "Yamma Ta'ali Douqi," and his mother has become a key element in his videos, adding a unique family-oriented appeal to his content. He launched his own successful YouTube show, "Hat Al-Qalaya w Elha'ni" (Bring the Pan and Follow Me), which has garnered significant engagement.
