Who is Aly Abdelazem

Aly Abdelazem is a former Egyptian doctor who transitioned into a full-time travel content creator and social entrepreneur. He is widely known for his bold decision to leave the medical profession to pursue his passion for traveling, exploring global cultures, and understanding the world on a deeper level. Through his visual content, he aims to document his journeys, offering an authentic perspective on the countries he visits and encouraging young people to follow their dreams. Before dedicating himself to travel, Abdelazem demonstrated an early aptitude for social entrepreneurship. In 2012, at the age of 17, he co-founded "Teens Club," an organization focused on empowering and developing teenagers in Egypt and Africa. The initiative connects youth with experts through workshops and seminars, providing a safe space for self-expression and talent development. The venture successfully engaged thousands of young people and collaborated with prominent NGOs and United Nations agencies. After practicing medicine, he moved to Germany, where he continued his studies, founded his own company, and worked for a period at Facebook, monitoring Arabic content. Today, under the handle "whereis_aly," his content focuses on human stories and authentic cultural experiences. With a goal to visit every country in the world, Abdelazem creates content that challenges stereotypes and fosters cross-cultural understanding, sharing his adventures in an inspiring style that resonates with a global audience.
