Who is Chef Nahla

Chef Nahla Al-Qadi, also known as Nahla Shawky, is a prominent figure in Egypt's television culinary scene, uniquely blending her passion for the culinary arts with a distinguished academic background. Despite her fame in the kitchen, Chef Nahla holds a Ph.D. in Islamic Archaeology, adding a unique dimension to her career. Her journey into the world of cooking began as a hobby, which she honed by taking specialized courses and launching a successful home-based food business in Kafr El Sheikh. Her television career took off on the Delta Channel (Channel Six), where she quickly established her presence. This led to an opportunity to host a program on the first Saudi channel. Later, she hosted the show "Aklet El Aela" (The Family's Meal) on Sada El Balad TV. Currently, she is the main host of the popular cooking show "Matbakhik Endina" (Your Kitchen is Here), which airs on Mehwar TV Channel every Saturday, Sunday, and Monday. Chef Nahla is renowned for her accessible style, simplifying complex recipes and presenting authentic Egyptian dishes with a modern, innovative twist, which has endeared her to a wide audience of home cooks and food enthusiasts.

Achievements of Chef Nahla

Chef Nahla Al-Qadi has remarkably transitioned from a specialized academic field, Islamic Archaeology, to the professional culinary world, becoming a familiar face on Egyptian and Arab television. She began with a program on the local Delta Channel and later expanded her reach to a Saudi audience through the first Saudi channel, reflecting her regional appeal. She has hosted successful cooking shows on major satellite channels in Egypt, including "Aklet El Aela" on Sada El Balad TV and currently hosts "Matbakhik Endina" on Mehwar TV Channel. Through these platforms, she has built a substantial viewership by simplifying recipes and providing practical, valuable content for her audience.
