Who is Dr. Dalia Ghozlan

Dr. Dalia Ghozlan is an influential Egyptian physician and health awareness advocate specializing in women's health and public health. She graduated from the Faculty of Medicine at Ain Shams University with a Bachelor of Medicine and Surgery. Dr. Ghozlan has dedicated her career to empowering women by disseminating reliable medical information in a simplified manner across social media platforms, addressing crucial topics such as reproductive health, pregnancy, the menstrual cycle, and menopause. Dr. Ghozlan is a prominent figure in health media, serving as a physician and presenter on the "Doctor Health Program" on CBC. She is also a co-founder and the medical content creator for the "Enti Al Aham" (You Are More Important) initiative, which aims to support women across various health, psychological, and social aspects. She has collaborated with international organizations like Pathfinder and USAID on field projects in various Egyptian governorates, focusing on family planning and reproductive health. Her involvement in major awareness campaigns with esteemed institutions like Baheya Hospital and Ain Shams University Hospitals underscores her profound commitment to improving women's health within the community.

Achievements of Dr. Dalia Ghozlan

Dr. Dalia Ghozlan is a certified trainer in combating the medicalization of Female Genital Mutilation (FGM) by the Royal College of Obstetricians and Gynaecologists (RCOG) in the UK. This certification highlights her active role and expertise in national campaigns against this practice, where she contributes to training medical professionals and raising community awareness about the physical and psychological risks of FGM. Dr. Ghozlan regularly participates as a panelist and moderator at major medical conferences. A notable achievement includes leading a pivotal session on "The Impact of Social Media on Medical Practice" at the IAAUG conference, attended by leading medical professors in Egypt. This demonstrates her status as a leading voice bridging medical expertise and digital media. She has made significant contributions to the "Enti Al Aham" (You Are More Important) initiative, founded by Dr. Amr Hassan, as a medical content provider and a co-founder. Through this initiative, she has worked to offer free awareness and treatment services, as well as organizing workshops and field campaigns aimed at empowering women's health and social standing throughout Egypt.
