

Osama Gaweesh

Egyptian Journalist & Broadcaster

1988-03-16 - Egyptian - United Kingdom

Read More

Who is Osama Gaweesh

Osama Gaweesh is an Egyptian journalist and broadcaster based in the United Kingdom, renowned for his critical approach to Egyptian and Middle Eastern political issues. Born on March 16, 1988, he began his career as a dentist and political activist in Egypt before transitioning to media following the political changes of 2013. Gaweesh launched his media career in Turkey, where he co-founded the opposition TV channel 'Mekameleen' and gained prominence as the presenter of the high-profile 'Sisi Leaks,' earning the nickname 'The Leaks Anchor.' He later joined Al-Hiwar TV in London, where he currently hosts a daily talk show. Today, he presents 'Akhir Kalam,' broadcast on his YouTube channel and other platforms, attracting a wide audience. In addition to his television work, Gaweesh writes opinion pieces and analyses for leading international outlets such as The Guardian, Newsweek, and Middle East Monitor. He is also the founder and Editor-in-Chief of 'Egypt Watch,' a platform focused on Egyptian affairs. Living as a refugee in the UK, Gaweesh continues his work as a prominent opposition voice through his various shows and the podcast 'Hekaytak.'

Achievements of Osama Gaweesh

Osama Gaweesh rose to prominence in Arab media as the first journalist to air and publish a series of secret audio recordings attributed to Egyptian President Abdel Fattah el-Sisi and other senior officials. Known as the 'Sisi Leaks,' this groundbreaking work created a major stir across the Middle East and established Gaweesh as a leading figure in opposition media. He founded the news platform 'Egypt Watch,' where he serves as Editor-in-Chief. The platform monitors and reports on political and human rights developments in Egypt, providing critical perspectives and becoming a trusted source for followers and researchers interested in Egyptian affairs. Gaweesh has built a strong international media presence through his articles and analyses published in major global outlets such as The Guardian, Newsweek, and Middle East Monitor, further cementing his reputation as an influential Egyptian journalist in exile with the ability to reach and impact Western audiences.

Read More