Who is Waleed Miqdad

Waleed Miqdad is a Jordanian media personality and content creator who rose to fame as a child star on the satellite channel "Toyor Al Janah," founded by his father, Khaled Miqdad. Born on December 30, 1999, he grew up in an artistic environment, performing alongside his brother, Motasem Billah "Assomi," in numerous songs and programs that achieved widespread success across the Arab world and became a nostalgic part of an entire generation's childhood. As he transitioned into adulthood, Waleed successfully pivoted from television to digital content creation. He co-founded the YouTube channel "Assomi & Waleed" with his brother, which features a variety of content including vlogs, challenges, and comedic skits, garnering millions of views. He also manages his own personal channel, where he shares aspects of his daily life and his interests in photography and directing. Miqdad currently resides in Kuwait, where he completed his university education. In August 2021, he married Nour Ghassan Miqdad, and they frequently share their life with their followers across various social media platforms.

Achievements of Waleed Miqdad

Waleed Miqdad was a key figure in the massive success of the "Toyor Al Janah" channel since its launch in 2008, which became one of the most famous children's satellite channels in the Arab world. His songs and programs with his brother "Assomi" established them as childhood icons for millions of viewers. Miqdad successfully transitioned to digital media platforms, co-founding the "Assomi & Waleed" YouTube channel with his brother. The channel has attracted a massive fanbase and millions of subscribers, reflecting his ability to adapt to changing audience interests and maintain his popularity years after his initial debut.
